DEPUTY SHERIFFS INJURED IN CRASH

The result of two automobile accidents last Saturday afternoon, three met death, and four deputies of Sheriff James J. McGrath are in hospitals, recovering from their injuries.

Those fatally injured were James Walter, Mrs. James Walter and Mrs. Jessie Phillips, of San Mateo. All three were colored people.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Meeks, who was seriously injured, is in the Petaluma hospital. Hopes are entertained for his recovery. Matron Mary A. Granger is also in the Petaluma hospital, suffering from injuries. Deputy Sheriffs Thomas Maloney and C. A. Callaghan are in the South San Francisco hospital, both suffering from painful injuries.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Meeks has many friends in Daly City, where he lived for a number of years, and all are hoping for his speedy and permanent recovery.

The series of accidents started last Saturday afternoon when Deupty Sheriff Meeks and Mrs. Granger were on ther way to tthe Mendocno state hospital with a woman patient. At a point about a mile north of Petaluma, Meek's car started to skid on a curve and went into the ditch up against a steep bank. Mr. Meeks was crushed against the steering wheel. Mrs. Granger was thrown out of the car and suffered a twisted ankle and cuts on the knee. The woman patient was not injured.

When word of the accident reached Redwood City, Deputy Sheriffs Callaghan and Maloney started for Petaluma. First they called to find Mrs. Meeks, but were unsuccessful. They then started alone up the Bayshore boulevard. Near Mills Field a car driven by James Walter, of San Mateo, and containing Mrs. Walter and Mrs. Phillips, skidded and overturned directly in front of the officers' car. Maloney was at the wheel.

Maloney had no recourse but to plunge headlong into the ouerturned automobile. Mrs. Walter, was killed outright. Walter died at 1 o'clock Sunday, morning, and Mrs. Phillips passed away Sunday afternoon. All three deaths were due to skull fractures according to Deputy Coroner S. Nieri, South San Francisco.

All three occupants of the Walters car were thrown clear when tthe accidetn occurred and the car burst into flames. Callaghan and Maloney extricated themselves and their car. The burning automobile attracted hundreds of motorists, and the South San Francisco fire department. The dying were hurried to the South San Francisco hospital on a piece of the fire apparatus.

VETERAN FIREMEN MAKE PLANS FOR ANNUAL WHIST

Plans have been completed by the Veteran Firemen of Daly City for their fifth annual turkey whist, which will take place at the Daly City Auditorium on Friday evening, November 21. Extensive preparations are being made for this affair, an event which in the past has met with great success and marked the Veteran Firemen as great hosts.

The committee includes A. Vireno, president of the Veteran Firemen's Association; Ed. Ford, scretary; H. W. A. Rickman, A. Green, H. H. Smith, William Goldkuhl, A. J. Bodien, J. Twesten, A. P. Chesney, F. Hanson, J. J. Kennedy and A. Lang.

COLMA VISTA GRANDE DRUM CORPS BANQUET

Last Saturday night the members of the Colma Vista Grande Drum Corps, their wives and sweethearts, and the President, Mr. B. G. Kost, and his wife, gathered in the fraternal hall and enjoyed a delightful banquet. Arthur Bodien was toastmaster. A few appropriate remarks were made by B. G. Kost, George Connolly, E. Heim, E. Nessier, A. Bodien and William Bolger. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening. This affair was given to celebrate the recent victory won by this drum corps in San Francisco. At the conclusion of the dinner, serpentine and colored hats helped to make this a real gala affair. All who attended hope that there will be another such affair given in the near future.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY OF DEDICATION OF PARISH

Our Lady of Perpetual Help church will celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of the parish, December 8. A distinguished preacher, the Rev. Henry Jennings, C. ss. R., will give the sermons for the occasion, which will be a three day affair, that is a triduum, exemplifying every phase of the spiritual work of the church.

DALY CITY TO BAY ROAD TO BE PAVED

The contract for paving Hillside boulevard, important lateral connecting Daly City with the Bayshore boulevard, was let to the Hanrahan Company of South San Francisco by the board of supervisors last Monday morning. The South San Francisco firm submitted a bid of $15,075, lowes in six.

Final action on the county's application for a permit to dispose of sewage of Colma and part of Daly City into the Vista Grande sewer of San Francisco, has been postponed by the state board of health until more engineering data is available and the state can be assured that no nuisance will be created, the supervisors were advised in a communication from the health board.

The permit is necessary before the board can proceed with the $146,000 sewage disposal project for Colma and Daly City.

Reports of county officers were filed and claims passed before the board adjourned.

CELEBRATE THEIR SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr and Mrs. R. Foppiano, of Evergreen avenue, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last Saturday night with a large gathering of friends and relatives present. The home was artistically decorated and a wonderful spread was set upon a tastefully arranged table, with bridal dolls much in evidence. They also had a mock wedding, Mrs. Flora Foppiano being the bride. R. Foppiano was the groom; Ernest Barazota, best mayor; Mrs. E. Barazota, matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Cohn and Miss Mabel Costa; Miss Beatrice Gaspar was flower girl. Buster Foppiano was ring bearer. All were dressed in the quaint costumes which were in style long ago. The happy couple received many lovely and useful gifts.

The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Mal. Tacchi, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cerratto, Mr. and Mrs. J. Simons, Mr. and Mrs. B. Domenici, Mrs. E. Brown, Mrs. Ethel Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. F. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Come early in the day to get first choice of the many articles suitable for Christmas presents. Here you will find dolls of all kinds, hand embroidered fancy work, dresses and articles suitable for the baby, novelties fit to please the most fastidious, and aprons to fit large or small, embroidered or plain, also candies for the sweet tooth. Coffee and sandwiches will be served all day and evening.

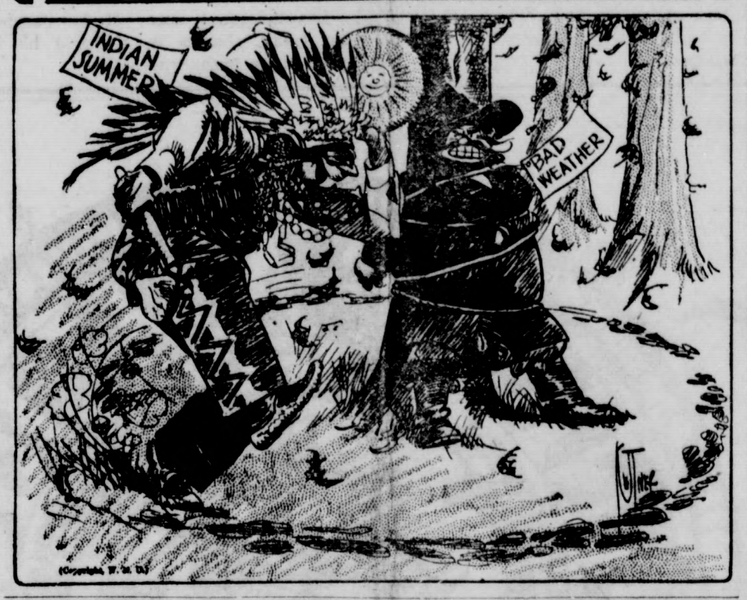
A Captive



SEEK ADDITIONAL FIRE ALARM BOXES

At the regular meeting of the City Council, held last Monday evening, all members being present and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding, a petition containing eighty-eight names was received from the new Jefferson district, asking that fire alarm boxes be installed in that district. The petition was referred to the members of the fire committee, who have been trying to work out a plan and come to a definite decision as to how and where these boxes should be installed.

A communcation was received from the building and fire committee, advising the Council of the resignation of Captain J. Lango from Station No. 1, on account of moving to Crockett, Cal., R. Melesky, of 165 Santa Barbara avenue, of Station No. 1, has also turned in his resignation, he having moved to San Francisco.

A communication was received from the California League of Municipalities, saying that a book was being published showing the entire proceedings of their convention, held at Long Beach last month. The clerk was instructed to purchase one copy.

A communcation was received from the Board of Fire Commissioners, recommending that no fire works be sold within the limits of Daly City in 1931. The board went on record as favoring the recommendation, and being strictly opposed to the sale of fireworks.

It is the wish of the Council to have another Christmas tree for the children this year. The merchants have promised their help this year, and will co-operate with the Council. The clerk was instructed to communicate with the Sciots' Band, who have so nobly given their services on previous occasions.

The monthly report of the health officer was read and ordered filed.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Little Marie Reardon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Reardon, of Rice street, celebrated her fourth birthday on October 28, with a party given in her honor, to which her little friends came bearing many lovely gifts. The home was decorated with Hallowe'en favors. The little guests spent a most delightful afternoon and enjoyed indoor games. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed by the following guests: Carrie and Stanly Parmisano, Tom and Frank Rancatore, Geraldine Parmisano, Eugene Green, Ernest Huber, Barbara Puppo, Claire Filiatrault, Mrs. M. Rancatore, Mrs. Albert Parmisano, Mrs. George Romiguere, Mrs. A. Marden, Mrs. A. Puppo, Mrs. E. Huber, Mrs. E. Reardon, Mrs. J. Reardon.

NAPA SODA NINE DEFEATS LOCALS

The hard luck that has been pursuing Daly City since entering the Spalding winter league again made its appearance last Sunday. The Merchants were defeated, 8 to 7, by the Napa Soda Thirties in a heart-breaking contest.

Daly City out-hit the Thirties 15 to 8, but failed to score more than seven runs, due to the errorless fielding of the winners; while Napa Soda was scoring seven times on the second frame on three hits and three walks.

Gene Keagle, local pitcher, lasted only one an a half innings aganst the Soda batters. His uncontrolable wildness was responsible for five runs, and before Al Toole, his successor, could check the rally, seven runs were chalked up.

The local nine obtained hits in every inning except the fifth and ninth, but were helpless against the sensational fielding of the Thirties. George Rettig obtained four hits in five times at bat to lead the Merchants' offense.

Next Sunday the Merchants will have a chance to redeem themselves against the Mission Reds. This contest finds both teams near the end of the standing, and will have the earmarks of a grudge battle.

TANFORAN RACES BEGIN TOMORROW

Thousands of racing fans from all over San Mateo county and the West will gather tomorrow (Saturday) at Tanforan race course in San Bruno for the inaugural of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association's fall meeting. More than 750 horses are stabled at the track in preparation for the 25-day session, ending December 13.

Tanforan, San Mateo county's sporting green on El Camino Real, about 12 miles south of San Francisco, has taken on gala attire for the fall meeting. New stables have been added, the club house enlarged, and the whole plant painted and brightened up generally. The track has been worked over for weeks and is in fast shape for the opening tomorrow—Saturday.

Some of the finest horseflesh in America will be at Tanforan during the meeting and will participate in the series of high stake races being offered by the Association. The opening day feature will be the Inaugural Handicap, worth $2,500. Twenty nominations have been made for this race, including some of the finest horses in turfdom. The race will be for a mile and 70 yards out of the Bahr starting gate, a decided improvement over the old method of starting.

The nominations for tomorrow's (Saturday's) feature include Easter Stocking, Honor Bright, Nellie Custis, Fatigue, Bud Broom, Hand-to-Hand, General Jackson, Fatin Spar, Lady Seth, Schooner, Seth's Hope, Upright, Gold Rush, Cantankerous, Irfaneh, Mi Concha, Andomeda, Tonto Rock, and Dark Ayr.

Another attractive feature at this meeting will be improvement in jockeys. Some of the best known riders in the country have come to Tanforan with their stables to ride in daily events. Much better riding will be noticed at this session than was witnessed during the spring meeting at the track. Ralph Ayraud, Chicago, and Lloyd Fage, California sensation in the East, will be among the high class boys. Several native son riders are expected to make a showing this season.

Judge Joseph A. Murphy will again be presiding steward and director of racing. Judge Murphy just arrived from Chicago and is one of the best known racing masters on the American turf. He said today that Tanforan would be conducted on the same high principles as prevail on Eastern tracks. He commended the improvements made at the track and said that he expected this meeting to equal any he had ever attended in quality of horses and riders, and good purses.

W. R. Norvell, J. S. Rothert and Peter Clark will be racing judges. Jack Dennis will be track superintendent, and Des Dressen will have charge of the option department. Post time will be promptly at 2 P. M.

Tanforan will have ample parking facilities for the thousands of cars expected at the inaugural. Southern Pacific trains and bus lines will bring fans direct to the track from all over the state. Special police will handle parking and facilitate the filling and emptying of the big arena.

REDWOOD CITY HALTS PLAN TO WIDEN ROAD

Plans for the widening of El Camino Real through Redwood City to make it a 100-foot highway received a serious setback last Monday night when property owners along the thoroughfare refused to consider a 17-foot setback line for the proposed widening. The property owners gathered at a meeting of the city planning commission and members of council.

The property owners demanded that the first move for the 100-foot wide highway come from the State Highway department. They wanted to know more definitely just what the state proposed to do, and whether or not the state had the money available to finance the proposition.

Until such time as the State Highway department makes the first move, no further action will be taken, the planning commission announced at the conclusion of the meeting.

"DOES GOD HEAR?" WILL BE SUNDAY SERMON TOPIC

"Does God Hear?" will be sermon topic in Grace Presbyterian church, Hanover street and Evergreen avenue, at the 7:45 P. M. service, Sunday. Whose fault is it if He seems not to hear—His or ours?

Young people's meeting takes place at 6:45 P. M., to which the young people of the community are invited. Miss Freida Harder is the new president, and preparations are being made by the young people to do their part in helping to make the 1931 Christian Endeavor convention a great success.

THE KING OF SPORTS COMES TO TANFORAN

Racing opens at Tanforan next Saturday. The king of sports comes back to California after a successful meeting last Spring and brings to the Golden State thoroughbred racing second to none in the country. With the class of horses already on the grounds approaching that at Belmont Park, Arlington Jark and Pimlico, and a competent line-up of jockeys, the quality of the sport will of the highest.

Four stakes will feature the twenty-five day meeting. These are the $100,000 San Francisco Handicap, the $5,000 Pacific Coast Breeders Handicap, the $5,000 San Bruno Handicap, and the $5,000 San Mateo Handicap. Some of the best handicap horses in training are entered and will be seen in action in these stakes.

San Francisco is becoming the center for a great army of sportsmen here for Saturday's Inaugural Handicap. This will be a gallop of one mile, with a purse of not less than $2,500. The Pacific Coast Breeders Association, sponsoring the Tanforan meeting, are making preparations to handle a record opening day throng. The Tanforan course, located at San Bruno, is reached from San Francisco by way of Southern Pacific Railway, Market Street Railway, or Bayshore and El Camino Real state highways.

The Bahr starting gate, from which all starts will be made, will be erected and in operation shortly. This is the first time this starting device, insuring almost perfect breaks, has been seen in the Far West. It has been used with great success on Chicago tracks this summer.

The historic Tanforan clubhouse promises to be the scene of many parties on Inaugural day. Social leaders of the Bay district are making elaborate plans to entertain with an afternoon at the races and those who will attend should make a cross-section of California's most substantial citizenry.

Bringing an "All California" stable of horses, Major Sven Christenson is an arrival at tthe Tanforan race track. He moved over from Pleasanton to be here for the Inaugural Handicap, which opens the twenty-five day race meeting next Saturday.

Christenson is one of the largest breeders in California. His stable consists of six horses, Charming Homme, Deer Hills, Fairy Melody, Sure Hills, Mary Hills and Beautiful Hills. Most of them are the get of Langdon Hills, an imported sire. Fairy Melody and Charming Homme demonstrated their fitness at the recent Del Monte meeting and will be ready to run opening day. They have been conditioned for further campaigning at Pleasanton.

An international aspect will be given some of the Tanforan races with the racing of four Hawaiian horses. This stable, owned by Hartwell Carter, but recently shipped here from Honolulu, will compete in overnight events, none of their chargers having been named for any of the four big stakes.

The steeds were foaled on the 600,000 acre Parker ranch on the island of Hawaii. They are Monne Keala, a brown filly two years old by War Shot-Awapuhi; Waraleale, brown filly two by Rodgers or Advance Guard II.-Myrulla; Lanae, a brown filly by Rodgers-Santa Javelina; and Laumaia, a brown gelding three by War Shot-Pavlowa.

Ray Kelly, a former jockey, is training the Carter string. They have completely recovered from their long ocean voyage and are showing to advantage in morning workouts. Their one drawback is the fact that they have never been to the post, but a bit of experience will soon correct that.

The horses of Joe Toplitzky, Los Angeles real estate operator and sportsman, have left New York for Tanforan. Good and Hot, a nominee for the $10,000 San Francisco Handicap, heads this stable. R. F. Carman, Sr., is in charge. Four horses, the property of the Pasadena stable of Jack Atkin, are in the same car.

RADIO MAY BE USED IN HIGHWAY PATROL

Research experiments are being made by the California Highway Patrol to determine the possibility of establishing radio telephonic connection between highway patrolmen working on their beats and their district and central offices, it is announced by the Diviison of Motor Vehicles at Sacramento.

A special type of radio telephone, light enough to be carried on a motorcycle but powerful enough to have a range of several hundred miles, is being considered, it was stated. If successful this will enable the district inspector or squad captain to get in immediate communication with his men in case of accident or other reason necessitating a quick move of officers from one place to another.

The preliminary plan of experiment involves the establishment of a 200-wat transmitter at the headquarters of the highway traffic school at Mather Field, near Sacramento.

Four cars equipped with receiving sets will be sent to different parts of the state to pick up the messages sent out from the transmitter. One of those will operate in the extreme northern counties, another in the southern counties, another along the coast and a fourth in the interior valley.

These cars will make daily observation to determine where the so-called "dead spots" are located.

Information secured by the patrol indicates radio telephones are being used to good advantage by police patrols in a number of American cities, a notable success having been attained with them in Detroit.

Perfect communication, however, has thus far been possible where the distance between transmitters and receivers is relatively small.

The problem of the California patrol is to work out a system by which the officer may communicate with his superiors and receive their orders when at a considerable distance from his base.

Commenting on the experiments, Frank S. Snook, Chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, declared highway law enforcement work in California would be revolutionized if they are successful.

"Under present conditions we have no quick and sure means of getting in touch with our men on the highways in case they are needed to clear up a traffic jam or give aid in accidents," he said. "The men are required to telephone to headquarters from points along the line, but this system is slow and the need for the officers is frequently gone before we can get in touch with them.

"The radio telephone would enable us to get in immediate touch with the men and to send them wherever needed without delay or confusion."

Psychological note: If he carries his small change in a purse he is probably a tight-wad.

GILROY WILL STAGE TWO-DAY ROUND-UP

Gilroy, the city that was founded by and named after the first Anglo-Saxon settler in California, is today looking forward to the greatest celebration ever staged in this section of the Santa Clara Valley.

On November 15 and 16 the city of Gilroy will stage a two day Round-up and Gymkhana, which on both days will begin with a monster parade, followed by a rodeo and polo games and consummated by a Cowboy Dance and '49 Camp in the evenings.

The dance and '49 camps will be held Friday and Saturday night. The Round-up and Gymkhana itself will be held at Wheeler field, where for the first time in the history of round-ups and rodeos champion polo players will match their skill against Western cowpunchers in a series of polo matches. Representing the polo players will be Captain Forrester and Captain McCreery, who are members of the British national championship team, and who are rated as two of the best eight players in the British Empire. In addition to the polo games there will, of course, be bronco riding, steer roping, stake races and all the sports of the Old West.

The Fighting Tenderfoot

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, wild western town, is shot at from ambush by Shep Sanderson, who mistakes him for Judge Warner, whom certain cattle interests wish to prevent holding court. Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her, warns Garrett not to go to Concho because of the big cattle war. In town Sanderson picks a fight with Garrett and is getting the worst of it when Ingram, cattle baron, interrupts. Steve Worrall tells Garrett about the cattle war between Ingram and Steelman, father of Barbara. Garrett tells Ingram he desires to remain neutral, but the latter declares there can be no neutrality. Bob Quantrell, young killer for Ingram, saves Garrett and an Englishman, Smith-Beresford, from being shot by Sanderson. The three become friends. Garrett accidentally witnesses a meeting between Barbara and Ingram. They are lovers. Garrett and the Englishman buy a ranch with Steelman as silent partner. Fitch, Steelman man, kills an Ingram follower. A posse starts in pursuit and Fitch stops at the "tenderfoot ranch."

CHAPTER V

Garrett Holds the Fort

From the doorway, where he sat smoking a placid pipe, Smith-Beresford drawled comment.

"Picture of a young man in a hurry," he said. "Study from life."

O'Hara saw a rider coming over the hill. The Britisher had not overstated the case. If ever a man was in a hurry this one was. An arm moved up and down as he quirted his horse. The animal was jaded, but it stuck to a labored lope.

"Fitch," O'Hara said.

"Righto; By Jove, he's not coming down here. He's heading for the clump of timber up there. Wonder what's up, Garrett."

"Some one is after him. Maybe the posse headed him off."

Five minutes later horsemen come into view, a long straggling line of them. O'Hara counted twelve. They rode straight for the cabin. As they came closer he recognized Sanderson, Quantrell, Deever, and a youth known as the Texas Kid.

"We haven't seen anything of Fitch," O'Hara said to his companion. "We've both been in the cabin and didn't happen to look out as he passed."

"Count on me, Old Top."

"Think I'd better get my revolver. I don't trust Sanderson."

"You're speaking for me, too."

When they returned to the door at the cabin half a dozen members of the posse were dismounting. They were about a hundred yards from the house.

Sanderson shouted to them. "We want that bird Fitch an' we're gonna get him."

"Who?" called back O'Hara.

"Fitch. That's who. Send him out to us."

"There's nobody here but us. Come and see for yourself."

The men approached cautiously, keeping the two at the door covered.

O'Hara kept an eye on Sanderson. He was of the opinion that the man would take this occasion, if he could find any excuse at all, to settle the grudge he held against him.

The Ingram men moved past them, drooping spurs jingling, and poured into the house. Four or five stayed outside to keep an eye on the tenderfeet. Among these last was Quantrell.

"Who is this fellow and what's he done?" O'Hara asked.

"Fitch, the bird calls himself. He gunned Two-Ace Burke from ambush. I reckon you know all about it," Quantrell answered.

"We don't. Where did it happen? Is Burke badly hurt?"

"He'll never be deader," the lad replied callously. "We buried him in Boot Hill this mornin'."

Men trooped from the house. "Not there," one of them announced.

"No, but he's been there," the Texas Kid announced. "He had breakfast right in that room. Fitch never was thorough. I know that bird. He didn't wash his cup an' plate."

"Some one had breakfast here. You're right about that," O'Hara admitted. "We just go back from the camp where our boys are branding. Whoever this fellow was he's gone before we got here."

"What's the use of foolin' with these pilgrims?" Sanderson cut in savagely. "They know where Fitch is at. They'll tell us or we'll bump 'em off right now."

"Sure they know." This from a freckle-faced cowboy named Buck Grogan. He was a brother of the man known as the Texas Kid.

"They've thrown in with Steelman and his outfit," spoke up a big rangy fellow whose right cheek bulged from a wad of tobacco. "Been livin' up at his place. Betcha the Old Man's backin' this very ranch."

O'Hara looked around on them, brown competent men, hard-visaged, ruthless. They had ridden hard and far for vengeance. He realized that they were not going to be particular where the blow fell. If they could not find Fitch they might strike at the men who they thought were protecting him. Any adherent of Wes Steelman's would do, given a reasonable excuse. He could not understand the psychology of such people. There was Bob Quantrell, for instance. He had been friendly with Smith-Beresford. He had protected them both. But Garrett knew that now he would not lift a hand to save them if Sanderson or the others moved to strike.

Quantrell spoke. "I'm going up to that bunch of timber an' comb it. Three-four of you fellows come along with me. We'll take care of these gents when we get back."

Three men followed Quantrell to the horses. The four mounted and rode toward the grove.

O'Hara caught the eye of his partner and the two edged back toward the cabin. Very soon the riders would make a discovery, one which might have a disastrous reaction in precipitating trouble.

"We've nothing against any of you," O'Hara explained. "We have started here as peaceable ranchers. If we can we want to be friendly with our neighbors. There's room for all of us, a wide range, plenty of grass."

From the timber above a shot rang out, followed by a puff of smoke.

"Dad gum it, they've got him!" the Texas Kid cried, and he started up the hill on foot.

Three men followed him. The others stayed to watch the partners. Among those who remained was Shep Sanderson.

Garrett flung a glance toward the battle ground and saw that the attackers were drawing closer to their prey. He heard voices in parley. The shots ceased.

A shout came down to them. "He's give up."

Men emerged from the timber. The one who moved in the center of the little group, the prisoner, walked with a limp. Evidently he had been wounded.

Sanderson chose that moment, before his companions above could reach him to object, for his revenge. He fired from the hip. O'Hara felt the shock of the bullet. It had struck his cartridge belt at the buckle and glanced off, though he did not know until later that he was not severely wounded.

What followed came so rapidly that there was no orderly sequence to it in O'Hara's mind. He could hear the roar of guns, his own among them. A flash of flame seared his shoulder. His companion staggered, leaned against the door jamb, and cried, "I'm hit." He moved through lanes of fire. Figures loomed up in the smoke and vanished. Some one pushed close against him, striking with a knife. He pressed the revolver against yielding flesh and pulled the trigger. The man gave way with a groan that was half a scream.

O'Hara's revolver was empty. He was in the doorway now, astride the prostrate body of his partner, though how he had got there he did not know. Out of the fog of smoke a face loomed. He flung the empty weapon at it, stooped, and snatched up the six-shooter of his friend. There was no conscious volition on his part. The .45 began to roar.

One moment the day was filled with the fury of battle. The next the sound of it had died away. O'Hara's enemies were falling back, driven into retreat by the steadiness of his fire.

Once more his revolver hammer clicked on an empty chamber. Garrett dropped the weapon, stooped, and picked up his partner. He carried him into the house and laid him on a bed, then swiftly set about putting the cabin into a state of defense. Bolting the back door, he barricaded it with a trunk. He drew the window curtains. Another trunk he pushed into the front doorway, then dragged a mattress there and propped it up in front of the trunk as a protection against bullets.

All this had taken him scarcely a score of seconds. From a rack he drew rifles, a repeating Winchester for one, and two of Smith-Beresford's hunting guns brought with him from England.

From behind the trunk and mattress O'Hara took in the situation. Two men were wounded seriously. He could see them lying on the ground where their companions had dragged them. Most of the others were gathered in a group near the horses. Sanderson, waving a bandanna meant for a flag of truce, had stepped a few yards forward from the rest.

Garrett felt, as he had more than once in the past weeks, that odd lift of the spirit that came with danger. He was wounded in two places. His companion lay helpless on the bed. A dozen desperate men, all heavily armed, were ready to swoop down on him. But he had proved his mettle. He had fought them, one against four, and driven them into retreat. These killers could and they probably would destroy him and his friend. But he knew, with an exultant thrill of racing blood, that he was not afraid of them; and he knew, too, that there would be no safety in surrender. Two of them had been wounded by him, perhaps mortally. The others would have their revenge, Sanderson would see to that.

From the bed came a faint murmur.

"Hold the fort, Old Top."

"No use to give up. Sanderson would never let us get away alive. . . . Badly hurt, Lyulph?"

"About all I can carry, old chap. In the chest."

"Sorry. I'm hit in the shoulder and the stomach, but I feel pretty strong yet. Wonder if they'll rush the place."

Garrett could see the enemy grouped in consultation. Presently the men scattered. They were spreading out to surround the house. A bullet struck the trunk in front of him. Another plowed into the mattress. The Winchester in his hands barked an answer.

Apparently they had settled down to a siege. O'Hara could count at least five foes in the fan-shaped open space in front of him. They were all behind cover, but the flashes of their weapons told him where they lay. Three or four were back of the stable with the horses and the prisoner. The others had disappeared. It was an easy guess that they were making a wide circuit to take him in the rear.

The besieged man slipped back from the doorway, leaving the barrel of a rifle showing beside the mattress. He dragged another of his partner's trunks to the back door and piled it on top of the first one. Lifting the table to the window, he put it on a box and nailed the top of it to the frame in such a way as to cover the glass entirely.

He hurried to his place in the doorway, fired two shots, and withdrew again to give his friend water in a dipper. "How're you feeling?" he asked.

His friend grinned feebly. "Boiler damaged. Can't get up steam." From time to time he coughed up blood.

Garrett went back to his post. There was nothing he could do for his companion and he could not leave the doorway for long at a time. He heard the sound of shots from the rear and the spat of the lead against the logs. The enemy had him completely surrounded now.

He waited for the next billow of smoke in front, fired at it, and put down the rifle. Unfastening the belt around his waist, he looked for the stomach wound. There was nothing there but a bruise where the metal buckle had been driven against the flesh. Undoubtedly the clasp had deflected the bullet and saved his life.

Hour after hour the siege dragged on. Smith-Beresford became delirious. Garrett bathed his face and chest, gave him water to drink, and left a wet cloth on his forehead.

The young lawyer knew that his own fever was mounting. The wound in his shoulder pained a good deal. It was his guess that the bullet had smashed a bone.

Grimly he recognized the fact that the attackers were paying him a compliment by their caution. They might have rushed the cabin and ended the affair in two minutes. Evidently they counted the cost as too great to pay. The men he had wounded were a sufficient object lesson to them.

What were they up to now? A wagon was being pushed from the back of the barn and headed toward the house. Four or five men were behind it. They were using it as a cover for their approach. Snipers from right and left kept up a steady fire to prevent his concentrating on the wagon.

The wheels of the wagon slewed to the right. A man crept forward to straighten them. Garrett drew a bead on him and fired. The man stumbled over his own foot and plunged to the ground. His body twitched and lay still. The others deserted the wagon and fled for the shelter of the barn.

The shot had been a lucky one for Garrett. But it decided the fate of the prisoner Fitch. One of the log rafters of the barn projected from the roof. The unfortunate man was led beneath this, a rope around his neck. The other end was thrown over the rafter. Before Garrett's eyes they hanged the cowboy.

It was a thing horrible to see. This boy they were hanging was no criminal. But he was no weakling. There was in him the stiff hardihood that frontier life begets. The rope already around his throat, he borrowed tobacco, rolled a cigarette, and smoked it. His horse was brought. He was helped into the saddle. As they started to lead the animal away he sprang into the air to make the fall of his body more violent.

Garrett turned away, sick at heart. He had to look again, to see what the enemy was about. They were gathered in a group discussing something heatedly. Plainly they disagreed. But the young man in the cabin knew that his affairs had come to a crisis. He heard a voice raised in sudden anger. A man detached himself from the group. "By cripes, I'll smoke the pilgrim out if I play a lone hand. What you birds need is sand in yore craws."

The speaker was Bob Quantrell. He walked to a horse and flung himself into a saddle. He reined the animal around savagely to face the cabin. The bronco went into the air sunfishing, came down, bucked up all humpbacked, and landed with legs as stiff as stakes. The rider had not yet found the stirrups. He lost his balance and shot through the air to the ground. Instantly he was on his feet again, running to catch the bridle.

Before he was in the saddle a second time an interruption occurred. Two riders, a man and a woman, galloped across the open toward the stable. The man was Dave Ingram, the woman Barbara Steelman.

Ingram dragged his pony to a halt and leaped to the ground.

"What's all this?" he demanded.

Deever moved forward. "These pilgrims have done killed Brad Sowers an' wounded three more of us. I don't reckon Pankey will make the grade."

"Who started it?" demanded Ingram.

The Texas Kid answered him. The young fellow had a blood-stained handkerchief tied around his arm. "We got to fannin' smoke all together, looks like."

The leader of the faction turned to Quantrell. "What was you aimin' to do, Bob, when you put on this exhibition of fancy ridin'?"

"Smoke 'em out, by cripes! Show this bunch of quitters a tenderfoot can't bluff me out."

Ingram looked with an impassive face at the swaying body of the dead cowboy. "I see you go' 'Fitch. Don't you reckon that's abo enough for one gather? Suppose you leave this for me. Before we go any farther I'd like to know who got on the hook first. An' why?"

"They did," Sanderson blustered. "They fixed Tom Fitch up with breakfast an' then they bid him out on us. Soon as we found him that pilgrim O'Hara began to fan smoke right away."

"How many in the cabin?"

Bob Quantrell answered, jeering at his companion and himself, "You got a surprise comin', Ingram. One live tenderfoot an' one dead one. The live pilgrim shot up consid'rable. Too much for the boys. They're allowin' to crawl off with their tails between their legs."

Barbara waited to hear no more. One of her friends was dead and the other wounded. Her place was with them, not here. She touched her pony with the spur and the animal jumped to a canter. Straight toward the house she rode.

Too late Ingram understood her intention. Her horse had covered one-third of the distance before he could make a move.

"Ladies' choice," murmured Quantrell insolently. "Right hands to yore pardners an' grand right an' left. Everybody waltz. I'll be doggoned if I don't begin to like the Hashknife outfit better than the Diamond Tail. No yellow in their stock, looks like."

Ingram looked at the young desperado coldly.

"Perhaps you'd like to join them," he said.

Unexpectedly Quantrell's answer jumped back at him, a sharp acceptance of the challenge. "You're d—d whistlin' I would. No complaints against you, Ingram, but I don't like the company I'm keepin'."

He backed warily toward his horse, rifle in hand. The boy's buck teeth showed in a snarl as he drew up his lip. The cold light blue eyes passed in little stabbing glances from one to another. He was ready at an instant's warning to begin flinging bullets.

No man moved to prevent him from going. They could shoot him down. That was certain. But not without loss. He was as quick, as accurate, and as deadly as a coiled rattlesnake.

"Don't push on the reins," Ingram said quietly. "Think it over awhile."

"No, sir. When I'm through I'm through. Anybody got any objections?" Again his eyes darted from one to another, trying to read and forestall the intentions of these ruffians with whom he was parting company.

If there were any objections none was expressed by anybody except Ingram.

"You're liable to rue this, Quantrell," his employer said.

"Not none," the boy replied curtly.

He had reached his horse. Warily he edged behind it, not for one moment lifting his eyes from the group he had left. His hand felt for the bridle, his foot for the stirrup. He swung to the saddle, backed the horse behind the stable, whirled it in its tracks, and dashed for the pines, looking back as he rode.

Garrett O'Hara watched with amazement as Barbara swung her cow pony and put it at a canter toward the cabin. She slipped from the saddle and moved to the door while he dragged aside the mattress to make way for her.

Once inside, she looked at him, eyes dilating with fear.

"Are you hurt—badly?" she asked.

"In the shoulder. I'll be all right. Afraid Lyulph is badly hurt. They hit him in the chest."

She looked at the bed where the delirious man lay tossing. "I'll take care of him. Watch out they don't rush the house. I don't think Mr. Ingram will let them, but I'm not sure."

Barbara made preparations to do what she could for the man on the bed. Once more Garrett lay down back of his rampart and took stock of the enemy. Ingram appeared to be issuing orders to his men. They hitched horses to a wagon, put hay in the bed of it, and lifted the two most seriously wounded of the posse into the wagon, after which the team was driven away, followed by most of the riders. One man stayed with Ingram.

Garrett reported the proceedings to Barbara.

"Wonder what he's up to," she said, moistening a bandage.

"He's coming toward the house—alone."

The girl ran to the door. "He hasn't even drawn a six-shooter. He wants to talk. Let him come in if he wants to."

Garrett drew back and the cattle man pushed his way into the house.

Two-Dollar Bill Called "Just Darned Nuisance"

The idea that there is something unlucky about the $2 bill—so that many persons tear the corners off them to avert misfortune—occasionally arouses curiosity.

A number of our readers have written in with suggestions to account for the belief in the unluckiness of this particular note. One, however, a merchant in Pennsylvania, says from his experience as a retailer that "there is no question of superstition in connection with the $2 bill, it is just a darned nuisance.

"There is no compartment provided in our cash register for them," he writes, "and when we are handed one by a customer we have to secrete it away somewhere until we get a chance to pass it on to the bank. We can't very well hand it out to another customer for change, that is if we want to retain their good will.

"The only possible use it has is when some one purchases a 2-cent stamp and hands us a $20 bill in payment. Then we can get back at him by unloading all the $2 bills we have on hand."—Literary Digest.

"Higher Place" Explained

Jack was the cause of much trouble to his parents. At school he was always at the foot of the class. One day, however, he came flying home.

"Dad—mum, I have got a higher place in the class," he cried.

His father gave him a dollar.

"Now, Jack," he asked, "how did you gain promotion to a higher place?"

"Well, it's like this, dad," said the young hopeful. "My desk is being mended."

Somewhat Out of Place

The place was crowded. It wasn't exactly a fashionable wedding, but there was no gainsaying the interest it caused, because both bride and bridegroom had been much in the public eye, she as an actress, he as a conjurer.

Everything went well until they reached the critical stage of the proceedings, and the clergyman asked for the ring.

The bridegroom plunged his hand into his pocket and brought out a rabbit. Then the horrified look in the clergyman's eyes and a startled exclamation from the bride made him realize that something was wrong. He looked down and saw the rabbit.

Whatever foreign language we try to learn, it sounds to the foreigners like their broken English does to us.

For fear he might forget the trick of handling the stick, the lad, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. O'Hara, hopped off four times and made as many perfect landings before the school gong sounded.

In quest of a specimen of the burro deer, a rare animal occasionally seen in Northern Mexico, Ralph H. Clock of Long Beach, former California fish and game commissioner, has started a hunt near the mouth of the Colorado river along the Gulf of California. The specimen is sought for a San Francisco natural history museum. The animal resembles a blacktail deer, but is much smaller.

Final action on the selection of a site for the proposed intermediate state prison for offenders between the ages of 18 and 24 will be taken, according to James A. Johnston, state director of penology. The search for a suitable location has narrowed down to two potential sites, one in Bouquet Canyon and the other on the Dunn Dairy Ranch, near Saugus, on the Ridge route. Both are in Los Angeles county.

Southern Pacific Company officials are considering plans to facilitate freight movements by rehabilitation of the old Danville line. The plans contemplate improvement of the old line from Avon, near Richmond, to Decoto. The work will include construction of a tunnel through the coast range. Freight movements will be made by way of the Dumbarton bridge, thus eliminating the slower haul through Oakland.

Although California is the leading state in the Union in number of automobiles per capita, it was not realized until the registration of voters closed for the last election that there is really an automobile for every registered voter in the state. Some counties have more automobiles than they have registered voters, and it is believed that Merced is in the lead, according to advices reaching the California State Automobile Association. Out of a population of 36,990, Merced county showed 11,637 registered voters. But the voters were outnumbered nearly 2000 by the motor vehicles in the county.

Efforts to restore the Point Reyes Lokout Station, abandoned in 1926, were announced by Abe Marks, manager of the marine department of the Chamber of Commerce. On his recent visit to the east coast, Marks conferred with Dr. C. C. Clark, assistant chief of the United States Weather Bureau in Washington, relative to the Point Reyes station. According to Marks, the cost of operating the station, which must be authorized by Congress, would be only $4000 yearly. Chief beneficiaries of the station would be the smaller lumber schooners which carry no wireless, of which there are many on the Pacific Coast.

Approval of plans for the proposed Smith-Huges building, agricultural addition to San Benito High School and Junior College at Hollister, has been given by Andrew P. Hill Jr., state chief of division of school planning, at Sacramento.

THE ARMISTICE OF 1918

Twelve years ago on November 11 the greatest war of history came to an end through an armistice between the Allied powers and the United States on the one hand and Germany on the other.

This historic document was signed in Marshal Foch's specal train at Rethondes, France, at 5 o'clock A. M., and provided for the cessation of hostilities six hours later. Accordingly the fighting ceased at 11 A. M.

While the armistice of November 11 marked the real termination of the war, it was the fourth of a series of rapidly moving events which brought the titanic struggle to a close.

Bulgaria had already surrendered unconditionally at Salonica on September 29; Turkey had surrendered at Mudros on October 31, and Austria-Hungary had surrendered at the headquarters of General Diaz, the Italian commander, on November 3. Left thus alone in the struggle, the defeat of Germany was inevitable.

In fact, Germany had appealed to President Wilson for peace on October 6, and the time between that date and the Armistce was taken up with diplomatic correspondence and the working out of the conditions submitted to Germany for acceptance.

These conditions left Germany absolutely shorn of all military and naval power which might enable her to take the offensive again. Signing of the treaty of peace followed on June 28, 1919, at Versailles, near Paris.

Since that time many additional treaties, pacts and agreements have been entered into by various nations.

Continued efforts to insure peace are being made by the world's leading statesmen, and upon the results of these efforts depend the most momentous consequences to the human race.

MRS. MILLER'S FLIGHTS

An American girl, Gertrude Ederle, showed British women that it was possible for a woman to swim the English Channel. Now an English woman, Mrs. Keith Miller, has set a new record for women flyers in crossing the American continent.

In a small monoplane Mrs. Miller flew from New York to Los Angeles in 25 hours, 44 minutes. Returning, she covered the distance in 21 hours, 47 minutes. Both records were better than those of Miss Laura Ingalls, American flyer, who had recently set a new mark for women in transcontinental flights.

While these records are not to be compared with the phenomenal flights of Captain Hawks and other men flyers, they are most impressive, and testify to the courage, skill and endurance of "ladies of the air."

Three men pretending to be plumbers robbed a Pennsylvania store. One such pretender is usually sufficient for an ordinary job.

OUR SEVEN LEAGUE BOOTS

Scientists of today say that the last half of the Nineteenth century and the first half of the Twentieth century will go down in history as the modern "Golden Age." Not the "Golden Age" perhaps of literature, art and drama, but the TRULY golden age of scientific progress.

The gap between the chiseled word and the modern printing press was short. The gap between the first internal combustion engine, forerunner of our present servant, still shorter. And the span of years between the first experiments of Telsa, Watt, Ohm and those other first successful pioneer delvers into the mysteries of electrical energy and our own modern Edison, Bell and Marconi seems but a day.

And it is in the lifetime of active men of today that the first feeble telegraph instrument ticked forth its immortal message between two rooms; that the first faintly glowing bamboo fragment gave way to the flashing incandescent lights and beacons of today. Hill and Harriman were building roads; Wilbur and Orville Wright experimenting at Kitty Hawk; Olds and Duryea and later Ford tinkering with "horseless carriages," when the present school child's parents were in school.

There was in those days no parcel post. And there was no rural free delivery. Street cars limped slowly, and the crowds aboard were not headed for a movie palace.

The mail order house was the delight of the farmer to whom trips to town by horse and wagon were long and laborious. Neighbors saw each other in scattered communities once in weeks, relatives living a few score miles apart visited once in years. A trip to a distant city was an adventure and marked a man as a traveler. And news, good or bad, came slowly by word of mouth or oft delayed letter.

What a difference between that picture and the one today of paved highways, lumbering trucks, great busses, skittering cars, the telephone, the radio, with television around the corner we are told, surely within a score or so of months.

The use to which we put these servants determines our satisfaction in life—and our progress as well. The airplane offers swift transportation; the train learns of new competition from the bus in long as well as short distance journeys; "never before have the long distance toll lines been given the use the last year has known," say the telephone people; and the radio is the most recent actor to enter upon the stage of rapidly moving scientific drama.

It has given us a faster moving life—a FULLER life; more time for leisure, more knowledge of the world and its current affairs; a greater variety of activities and the greater time to give to them. It means progress for Daly City if we "keep in step with the world" with our Seven League Boots.

BUILDING PROBLEMS

Fifty years ago only 30 per cent of the country's population lived in communities of over 2,500, while today the urban population is 60 per cent of the total. This drift to the cities has been accompanied by a revolution in construction methods with respect to both residential and business buildings.

The amazing increase in value of both classes of structures is a notable feature of our national progress. According to an estimate by the heating research bureau of the C. A. Dunham Company of Chicago, the value of all buildings in the United States today is 141 billion dollars, these structures and the land they occupy representing half of the nation's wealth.

Modern requirements have produced the towering skyscraper, the giant hotel and the cathedral-like picture theatre. Projects costing up to twenty millions are no longer unique. These developments have brought some most difficult engineering problems, especially in the matter of heating. But, thanks to American inventive genius, it is now possible to heat the largest or smallest building with sub-atmospheric steam in a manner that precisely meets outside weather conditions. It is likewise possible to zone a building and heat it to meet the needs of its occupancy, thus effecting great savings in fuel.

No one knows what problems may arise in connection with buildings of the future, but whatever they may be, American engineering skill will meet them.

Bachelors in Italy complain because they must pay a special tax. But suppose they were compelled to get married.

Marrying a girl who is beautiful but dumb would be all right if she would only stay that way.

Among time-saving devices the waste-basket holds a deservedly high place.

Most persons are eager to learn about business, especially other people's.

Tourists spent approximately $35,000,000 in Mexico last year.

AIDING THE SCHOOL CHILD

Within the last few years more than one-half of the states have enacted laws which in one way or another are designed to promote the health and physical safety of school children, according to the Office of Education in Washington.

Besides the efforts being made in behalf of the children as a result of legislation, much is being done in the same direction by school authorities in states where no special laws on the subject exist. Superintendents, home economics teachers, school physicians and physical training departments all contribute to the movement for child welfare.

One phase of this movement which has been given increasing attention of late is instruction in matters of diet. In this, a proper balancing of essential food elements and the selection of easily digestible foods present the main problems. Obviously, the programs involves excluding unsuitable or harmful foods and beverages.

Physicians and educators generally condemn the use of tea and coffee by growing children, as the use of these stimulants is considered inimical to the proper development of the child, both physically and mentally. Miss Dorothy Paull, director of the modern health crusade of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, recently said:

"We feel about coffee that an old horse needs stimulation, but a young colt needs holding down instead. Coffee and tea stimulate, but they have no food value except the small amount of cream and sugar used with them."

The movement for safeguarding the health of school children is one of the utmost importance. All parents should co-operate with medical and school authorities in adopting the measures which experience has shown to be benefical to their growing boys and girls.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

It may be surprising to some to be told that for nearly 100 years after the Declaration of Independence no women were employed by the government, but such is the fact, according to a recent statement by the president of the Civil Service Commission.

The first law permitting the employment of women as clerks in Federal government offices was passed in 1870. Today more than 28,000 women are employed in such offices in Washington alone, while nearly 60,000 more are employed outside of the capital city.

Women are being employed to such government positions as bacteriologist, biologist, botanist, chemist, econonist, educationist, patent examiner, pharmacologist, physicist, statistician, zoologist and technologists of various kinds. As is well known, many women hold postmasterships.

The employment of women in private business has shown a steady increase also, the number of women wage earners being nearly ten million.

Whether this increasing activity of women in industry, business and the professions is an indication of an improved civilization depends upon one's viewpoint. However that may be, women have shown their ability to engage successfully in nearly every vocation under the sun, and that they will continue to do so can not be doubted.

UNSIGHTLY SIGNS

In spite of he widely advertised "code of ethics" adopted some time ago by the billboard promoters, their habit of defacing the landscape and encroaching upon residential sections has by no means been abandoned.

Public sentiment has been so aroused in opposition to the billboard nuisance that a national committee for the restriction of outdoor advertising is making a vigorous campaign against the unsightly sign-boards which glare at one on every hand.

Among the organizations co-operating with this committee are the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Garden Clubs of America, the National Conference of State Parks, the American Society of Landscape Architects, historical societies, automobile associations, nature societies, and others interested in the preservation of outdoor beauty.

Appeals are being made to advertisers direct, it being pointed out that an offensive advertising sign makes ill-will for the advertiser, and tends to hurt rather than help his business.

A POLITE SUGGESTION

The gallantry of an old-time western newspaper man is recounted in a story which recently appeared in several publications. It concerns the late great actress, Sara Bernhardt, and the late Sam Davis of the Carson City, Nevada, Appeal.

Mme. Bernhardt and her company were playing in the West, when Davis was requested by the San Francisco Examiner to meet her in Reno and accompany her to the metropolis of California, and he did so.

After several days of acquaintanceship, during which Davis naturally showed the actress every attention, the time came to part, whereupon the "divine Sara" expressed her appreciation of his kindnesses by kissing him on either cheek and then on the mouth, saying:

"The right cheek for the Appeal, the left for the Examiner, the lips for yourself."

Nothing daunted, Davis made the polite suggestion: "Madam, I also represent the Associated Press, which serves 380 newspaper west of the Mississippi river."

Whether he received the additional expressions of appreciation to which he appeared to be entitled, the story does not state.

CONSIDER PROBLEM OF VOICE TRANSMISSION

When a lead-sneathed all-cable telephone circuit is eventually built between the Pacific Coast and Europe, problems will arise which the Bell system engineers are now trying to solve by experiements, according to word received by Manager L. M. Brown of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The Pacific Coast now talks with Europe across the American continent by open wire to the mid-west, then by 1,500 miles of cable to New York, thence to England by radio telephone. An all-cable line would be much freer from weather troubles, and would be generally more satisfactory to business intercourse.

Manager Brown quotes an article by A. B. Clark, in the Bell System Technical Journal, which says: "We must look forward to the time when a subscriber in San Francisco will talk by cable across the United States to York, then by cable and open wire to Newfoundland, by submarie to England and then by long cable circuit, let us say, to Constantinople; in other words, a 10,000 mile circuit length."

Long distance cables involve problems of voice transmission, such as "echo suppression" and "cross-talk." Such problems would be multiplied many times in a 10,000 mile cable.

A big problem would be to increase the velocity of the voice in the 10,000 mile cable. In such a line, using the present possible cable speeds, one second would elapse after a Pacific Coast subscriber speaks before the other's reply from Constantinople would reach him. This is considered "quite a long interval." Clark concludes that a velocity of 100,000 miles per second would be satisfactory. This is not possible now in cables.

Since 1915 the New York-Pacific Coast telephone circuits which run over the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company open wires from Utah, Arizona and Idaho, have been improved by Bell System engineers, until now, by modern "carrier" system, the velocity is about 175,000 miles a second, nearly equalling the speed of light. Clearness of conversation has been increased two-thirds.

HIGH CLASS HORSES IN INAUGURAL HANDICAP

Nominations for the $2,500 Inaugural Handicap at Tanforan race track Saturday afternoon reveals a class of horses suitable for stakes at Hawthorne, Belmont Park, or Pimlico. Twenty horses were named for the Inaugural classic, among them being such steeds as Nellie Custis, Easter Stockings, Tonto Rock and Schooner.

Weights will be issued Friday by Racing Secretary Washington H. Norwall, and it is considered likely that at least ten of the twenty will "stick" in the race and go postwards. The Inaugural will be the bright spot on Saturday's opening day's program, which starts the twenty-five day meeting sponsored by the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association.

A record crowd is expected Saturday to see these horses meet over the mile and seventy yard course. An exceptional supporting card, including the Hilltop sprint at six furlongs, is being arranged by Norvell.

The Audley Stock Farm of Virginia was the heaviest nominator in the Inaugural, putting Easter Stockings, Banner Bright and Nellie Custis into the race. At least two of them are expected to start. Jockeys Schutte and Callahan will be on deck to do the stable riding. Sam Gilmore of Los Angeles entered Bud Broom, a $15,000 acquisition in the east, and Hand to Hand. Johnny Coburn named a dark horse, Fatigue, fresh from New York.

Others in the race are C. B. Irwin's General Jackson and Irfaneh, Fred Almy's Tonto Rock, Willard Mack's Satin Spar, Mrs. Ted Horning's Rip Rap, Marvin Allen's Schooner, Seth's Hope and Lady Seth, owned by Mrs. J. A. Parsons, A. A. Baroni's Upright, the Woodside stable's Gold Rush, La Brea stable's Cantankerous, Jack Brannon's Mi Concha, and Andromeda and Dark Ayr, coupled as the C. E. Davison entry.

WHEREAS, HENRY W. HINDS and EVA E. HINDS, his wife, did make, execute and deliver a certain deed of trust, dated April 21st, 1928, to NORTHERN COUNTIES TITLE INSURANCE COMPANY, of and for the piece or parcel of land hereinafter described, as trustee for the benefit of JOHN STODDARD, to secure the payment of the promissory note for the sum of Four thousand and 00/100 ($4,000.00) Dollars, from said HENRY W. HINDS and EVA E. HINDS, his wife, in said deed of trust mentioned, and which said deed of trust was on the 24th day of April, 1928, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, in Volume 1652 of official records at page 479, and was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of San Mateo County, State of California, on May 29th, 1928, in Volume 351 of official records at page 438, and

WHEREAS, on the 20th day of June, 1930, JOHN STODDARD did appoint JOSEPH M. SALA and N. M. SCHLEEMAN as trustees to act in the place and stead of NORTHERN COUNTIES TITLE INSURANCE COMPANY, a corporation, by substitution of trustees which was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on July 9th, 1930, in Volume 2048 of official records at page 344, and

WHEREAS, on June 20th, 1930, the said HENRY W. HINDS and EVA E. HINDS, his wife, had made default in the payment of certain installments of principal and interest in said promissory note provided, and in the performance of the obligations specified in said deed of trust, by them to be performed; and

WHEREAS, they ever since have been and now are in such default; and,

WHEREAS, by reason of said default said trustees on July 9th, 1930, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, a notice of said default and breach on the part of said HENRY W. HINDS and EVA E. HINDS, his wife, and of the election of said beneficiary under the deed of trust to cause the land and premises described in said deed of trust to be sold, to satisfy the obligations contained in said promissory note and deed of trust, and which said notice of default, breach and election was recorded in the office of the said County Recorder more than three months previous to the first publication of this notice of sale; and,

WHEREAS, on the 22nd day of October, 1930, said JOHN STODDARD did and does now demand of said trustees that they sell the land and premises described in said deed of trust, pursuant to the terms thereof, and for the purpose of satisfying the obligations contained in said promissory note and deed of trust;

NOW THEREFORE, pursuant to the said demand, and in accordance with the terms and under the authority of said deed of trust, JOSEPH M. SALA and N. M. SCHLEEMAN, the trustees named in said deed of trust, hereby give notice that on Saturday, the 22nd day of November, 1930, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M. of said day, in the office of Sala & Sala, real estate agents, located at No. 3090 Sixteenth Street near the corner of Valencia Street, San Francisco, California, they will sell, as a whole, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for lawful money of the United States of America, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and partly lying and being in the County of San Mateo, California, bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

OUR SEVEN LEAGUE BOOTS

The daily magic in the conquest of space and time has given us new ears, new feet—shortcuts over distance and time. Our present-day systems of transportation and communication have out-stepped the legendary "Seven League Boots."

Our standard of living is largely based on these modern conveniences of transportation and communication. The airplane, railroad, interurban, street car, bus, automobile and truck; the radio, telegraph, telephone, postal service and printing press are among the modern marvels which have speeded up our life, cut down space and distance, and brought the whole world to our door.

The most successful and prosperous people are those who insist on having these modern conveniences available for their use—and who make the fullest use of them for effective living.

Have you ever stopped to think:

That there is now an average of one automobile to every home in the United States.

That at least every other home has a telephone.

That statistics say that radios are in almost as common usage as the telephone.

Every form of convenience in modern communication and transportation is within our reach—is ready and waiting for us to make efficient use of.

And by putting these modern marvels to the proper use of serving us and each other, we are forging ahead as a community and as a living center.

One of the greatest differences between people and communities is the use they make of these modern conveniences of transportation and communication.

Let's put our modern "Seven League Boots" to the best possible use in our competition with other towns and cities for superiority for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has bought a 150-acre farm near Princeton, N. J. Just what his purpose is has not been disclosed. Anyway, he will have room for a nice garden, a baby golf course, and a private landing field.

A new crime—that of house stealing—was reported when Miss B. Mignault, of Milwaukee, owner of a one-story brick structure, returned after a visit out of the city and found the building had been demolished and the wreckage sold.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, whose many marriages should make her an authority on the subject of husbands, says: "If husbands were clever they would never let us see them in the morning, because that is a time a woman thinks."

According to a census of wild beasts in our national forests made by the Department of Agriculture, there are about 550,500 deer, 52,600 elk, 5,000 antelope, 5,100 moose, 12,400 mountain sheep 17,200 mountain goats and 44,300 bears. Imagine the job of counting all those bears.

Excessive size may save Maggie Keeling, 600-pound Alabama negress, from a jail sentence. Officers charge her with selling whisky, but say she can't be gotten out of her house without cutting away a part of the wall, besides she could not be gotten into the jail if convicted.

Subscribers will no doubt applaud the fearless policy declared by a certain Western newspaper as follows: "We wish to announce that hereafter our policy, politically, will be independent. On all oother questions we shall endeavor to print the truth."

The inherent modesty of most really great men was again illustrated by a remark made by Dr. W. R. Whitney, director of the research laboratory of the General Electric Company, who said: "Instead of exhibiting pride at our accomplishments we ought to register shame at our crass ignorance. Nature probably holds in store much greater things for man than he has realized or can anticipate."

Herbert Smith, president of the British Miners' Federation, investigated labor conditions in Russia and upon his return made this interesting comment: "If I had been a Red when I went to Russia, I should not have been a Red when I came back, for the Russian workers, though they are our brothers, are none the less slaves."

A New York college has installed a miniature soap factory for the technical training of a certain group of students. The output will not be a highbrow perfumed product, as might be expected, but a plebian article for laundry use. Graduates will probably receive the degre of B. S. M. (Bachelor of Soap Making.)

George Paine, hardware merchant of Ashtabula, Ohio, recently received a letter which contained $2 in payment for a pick and shovel which he had sold the sender seventeen years ago with the understanding that the buyer would pay when he got the money.

When Miss Frances Dee, of Hollywood, ran past a signal, the judge asked her why she didn't stop when the officer whistled. She replied, "Why, Judge, the first thing mamma taught me was never, never to stop when a man whistles at me."

Joseph Tantleff, of Brooklyn, failed to "obey that impulse" and now regrets it. Although Mrs. Tantleff frequently provoked him to wrath and he was often tempted to lay violent hands on her, he declares he never did. But when she left him and sued for divorce he sadly said: "I'm sorry I did not give her a good beating, for it might have helped her."

America's beauty bill is now approximately a billion dollars a year, according to the Department of Commerce. Toilet prepartions used include 50,000 tons of cold cream, 25,000 tons of other facial creams, 26,000 tons of skin lotion, 9,000 tons of complexion soap, 6,000 tons of bath salts, 4,000 tons of face powder and 2,000 tons of rouge, to mention only a few items.

The absurd lengths to which the Federal Trade Commission will go in its efforts to "regulate" business is seen in a recent case in which it was held that the words "must sell" should not be used in an advertisement when there was no emergency compelling the sale of the articles advertised. A feeble-minded public should be extremely grateful for this protection.

Old documents recently discovered in Genoa, Italy, indicate that the total cost of the discovery of America was only about the equivalent of $6,000. Columbus got $270 for the job, while his two other captains received $150 each and the pay of a sailor was about $2 a month.

NEEDS FOR RED CROSS SERVICE ON INCREASE, SAYS CHAIRMAN PAYNE

Disaster Relief and Service to War Veterans Make Heavy Demands—First Aid on Highways New Plan.

Demands upon the public services that the American Red Cross is organized to give are increasingly heavy, and will continue to be so in the future, John Barton Payne, chairman, has announced.

The two major services of the society—service to war veterans and their dependents, and relief in disasters—show each year a greater number of persons helped by the Red Cross.

Pension legislation passed recently for World War Veterans, and increased allotments to all Spanish-American War Veterans, have given to Chapters and the national society many thousands of additional cases to handle, Judge Payne said.

In the past year help was given in 108 disasters. Ninety of these were in the United States, twelve in foreign possessions and six were in foreign countries.

Health activities of the Red Cross also are being extended, especially in the rural communities where all health authorities agree the greatest need exists. Red Cross, with 794 nurses in its employ, is the greatest employer of public health nurses in rural areas in the United States.

In its campaign against accidental deaths, begun twenty years ago with its life saving and first aid programs, the Red Cross now has adopted an additional program—that of combating the huge toll of life from automobile accidents on the highways.

Expenditures of the Red Cross in the past year were $4,254,796.34, of which $1,208,151.09 was spent in disaster relief, the chairman pointed out.

"The Red Cross depends upon the public for its support, through their memberships enrolled once each year in the period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day," Judge Payne said.

"We do not receive any support from the Government, or through other taxation, although as the President of the United States is president of the society, and one-third of its governing members are representatives of U. S. Departments, it ranks as a semi-governmental agency.

"By joining as a member, in the local Red Cross Chapter, once each year, during the annual Roll Call, every citizen will have a part in carrying on this great humanitarian task."

Motor Injuries Treated By Red Cross First Aid

In line with its work for the preservation of life and prevention of accidental death, the American Red Cross has adopted a new program of emergency first aid stations on the highways of the nation, where victims of automobile injuries will be helped.

In the last year 31,000 persons were killed as the result of automobile accidents and more than 1,000,000 were injured. As its contribution to the nation wide safety campaigns of other organizations, the Red Cross will aid through the emergency stations. A number already are in operation by Chapters on such important traffic arteries as the Westchester County, N. Y., park system, the Valley Forge and Gettysburg highways in Pennsylvania and the White Horse Pike in New Jersey, connecting with Atlantic City.

Saving Mothers and Babies Is Important Red Cross Task

Saving mothers' lives and better babies were important features during the past year of the Public Health Nursing Service of the American Red Cross. About four-fifths of the 794 nurses in the Red Cross work made more than 100,000 prenatal and maternity visits, in addition to assisting doctors in the examination of 1,309,409 school children.

Statistics reveal that the lives of two out of three American women who die in maternity cases could be saved if they received proper medical and nursing care. As more than 15,000 women die in the United States each year from various diseases of the maternal state, this means that more than 10,000 of these deaths are preventable.

Comfort Kits Sent 40,000 Service Men by Red Cross

Gay patterned cretonne bags, or comfort kits, containing articles useful and amusing, are sent by the Red Cross to 40,000 soldiers, sailors and Marines, on foreign service, as Christmas remembrances.

The little gift bags are donated and packed by women in Red Cross Chapters all over the country. They are despatched by Army transport in the early autumn in order to reach the foreign ports and posts of the U. S. services in time to be hung on the Christmas trees. Giving the remembrances from home is the outgrowth of a plan adopted by the Red Cross prior to the World War when so many National Guard regiments were on the Mexican border.

If your business is good you can always plan more advertising to make it better.

Only by using advertising space in local papers can you be sure to reap your full share of trade.

Newspaper advertising makes your business safe for success—it multiplies sales appeal.

Newspaper advertising tells the story of what you have to sell in one day, where otherwise it would take months.

Newspaper advertising is a wholesale reminder to the public and telling them time and time again where they should buy and how to save money.

Everybody knows that only worth while merchandise or service can stand the light of newspaper advertising.

Newspaper advertising lets everybody know what you know, so they can profit by buying from you.

Many Americans know that George Washington was versatile and engaged in many activities during his lifetime. But probably few know that he was once a book agent, and canvassed in Alexandria, Va., and vicinity for a book entitled "The American Savage; How He May Be Tamed by the Weapons of Civilization," of which he sold about 200 copies.

Persons who desire to have a green lawn the year round may take a tip from Edward Swan of Vancouver. For several years he tried without success to raise grass in his yard, as the soil was unsuitable. At last he gave the lawn a coating of concrete and painted it green.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harris, of Burlingame, formerly of Daly City, are receiving the sympathy of their many friends upon the death of their 15-year-old daughter, Ethel Louise, who passed away in Mills Memorial hospital, on Armistice Day, a victim of appendicitis. She leaves to mourn her passing, besides her father and mother, two sisters, Dorothy and Florence, and an aunt, Mrs. L. Pezzola, of Miriam street.

On next Thursday evening, November 20, in the Crocker Masonic Temple, Crocker Chapter, Order of De Molay, will hold another of its famous turkey whists, which proves to surpass all those given in previous years. The card party will start promptly at 8:15 P. M. and everyone is invited to attend. Score cards will be obtainable from any of the Chapter members or at the door the evening of the whist for the small sum of 35c.

Thursday of last week Mrs. Walter Schmidt, of South San Francisco, entertained the members of her whist club at an afternoon of whist. Among those present were a number of folks from Colma and Daly City. Refreshments were enjoyed by the following: Mrs. Albert Parmisano, Mrs. Anthony Parmisano, Mrs. James Reardon, Mrs. A. Sturla, Mrs. R. Horkey, Mrs. R. Fellman, Mrs. A. Fellman, Mrs. D. Morton, Mrs. H. Olson, Mrs. R. Silicani.

W. H. CLAY THANKS VOTERS

I take this opportunity to thank the voters for the splendid support given me for the office of Justice of the Peace of the First township of San Mateo county, on November 4, 1930. Although not elected, I am indeed grateful to my many friends and supporters who worked and voted for me.

It becomes my duty now to cooperate with and support those whom the people have elected, and this I shall be pleased to do.

W. H. CLAY.

WILL SELL FORGET-ME-NOTS FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Throughout the state of California, citizens' committees and groups of volunteer women and girls will conduct the sale of forget-me-nots on December 4, 5, 6 and 7, in co-operation with the National Forget-Me-Not Appeal of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. The little artificial flowers, made in hospitals and institutions by men who were wounded, injured or disabled in the world war, will be offered to the general public, to assist the hospitalization, employment, relief and welfare of wounded and disabled war veterans. The California observance of the Forget-Me-Not Appeal will be directed by the mayors and civic leaders of hundreds of cities and towns in the state; and the volunteer women and girl workers who are to sell the flowers will be organized in teams from societies, clubs, schools and districts.

PLEA OF FATHER FREES CRASH DRIVER

The plea of Walter Nasman, of San Francisco, that Carl L. Laxman, of 4148 Twenty-fifth street, San Francisco, not be held responsible for the daughter of his daughter, Rhea, 8, resulted in the dismissal of a reckless driving charge against Laxman in Justice of the Peace Edward Farrell's court at South San Francisco last Monday morning.

Laxman's car, in which the girl was riding, overturned November 2 on the Bayshore road. Nasman's little daughter received injuries from which she died while being taken to the South San Francisco hospital.

The father appeared in court, his head swathed in bandages, and told Judge Farrell that he declined to press the charge. Nasman said the accident was unavoidable.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. PLANS CHRISTMAS TREE

The members of the General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association held their monthly meeting Thursday, November 6, at the school, with Mrs. M. Boyle presiding.

After a very interesting discussion, a Christmas tree party was planned, where Santa will present each child with a present. There is to be a real tree, all decorated to the children's hearts content.

Miss G. Capana's class won the prize for having the most mothers at the last three consecutive meetings.

Mrs. M. Pechenino, study circle chairman, called a meeting for Wednesday, November 12, at 10 o'clock, at her home on Brunswick street.

Mrs. F. Watson, membership chairman, reported three new members.

A benefit whist is to be held, the proceeds to be sent to the district to replenish their budget, which has grown along with the entire seventeenth district. Mrs. Lyons is the chairlady in charge.

A report was made on the Jiggs dinner, and everybody agreed that it was a success, both financially and socially.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Eason, hostess.

Charges that the California-Oregon Power Company is charging California farmers more than it does those living on the Oregon side of the boundary line will be aired at a hearing to be held by the State Railroad Commission tomorrow.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1930 NUMBER 16

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

It pays to "Keep Your Home in Good Repair." The truth of these words is attested by thousands of people throughout the country. They have foud that home improvements more than pay for themselves through increased property value. They are receiving generous dividends in comfort and convenience.

Baldwin Coal—the Red Ash Fuel.

She Lost

The teacher was testing the knowledge of the kindergarten class. Slapping a coin on the desk, she asked: "And what is that?"

"Tails," said a voice from the back row.

Impossible

First Stranger (at the party): "Very dull, isn't it?"

Second: "Yes, very."

"Let's go home."

"I can't. I'm the host."

No Wonder

"Sonny, what's the noise upstairs?"

"Maw's dragging paw's pants over the floor."

"They shouldn't make much noise."

"I know, but paw's in 'em."

Hundreds of thousands of people burn Coal, because it leaves no greasy uncleanliness on the walls.

"I hear you have advertised for a wife. Did you get any replies?"

"Yes, hundreds."

"What did they say?"

"Oh, they all said: 'You can have mine.'"

Valuable Package

"Tommy, can you tell me one of the uses of cowhide?"

"Er, yes sir. It keeps the cow together."

One On Mother

Small Mary Jane: "Mother, why hasn't papa any hair?"

Mother: "Because he thinks so much, my dear."

Mary Jane: "Why have you so much, mother?"

Mother: "Run along and play now!"

The man who never broke any of the commandments is broke himself.
